The history of science, and in particular the history of medicine is not simply an account of discoveries. Its purpose is to explain the development of the scientific spirit, the history of man's reactions to the truth, the history of the gradual revelation of truth, the history of the gradual liberation of our minds from darkness and prejudice.

from "The History of Medicine"
George Sarton
1941

BASIC SCIENCES

It is the mind which is really alive and sees things, yet it hardly sees anything without preliminary instruction.

The human body is a circle,
of which each part may be esteemed
as both the beginning and the end . . .

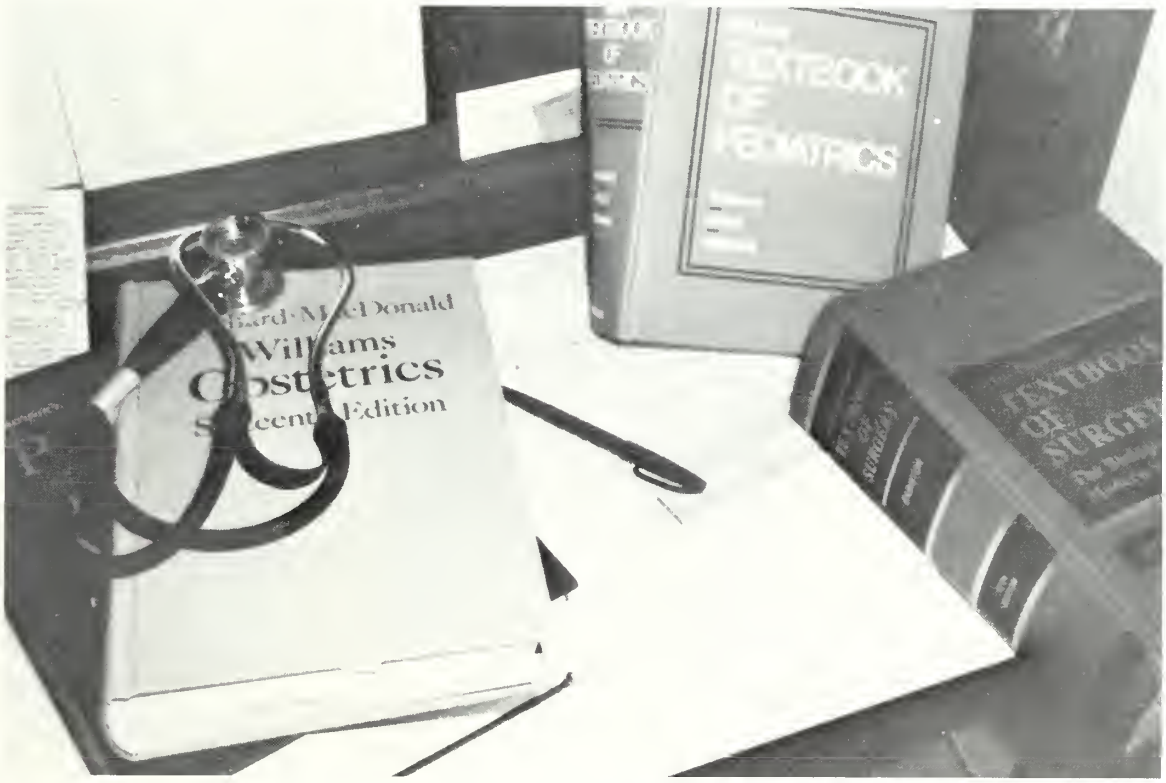
CLINICAL SCIENCES



What is the object of medical education? It is to enable the practitioner, on the one hand, to prevent disease by his knowledge of hygiene; on the other hand, to divine its nature, and to alleviate and cure it, by his knowledge of pathology, therapeutics and practical medicine.

You will see, then, that a distinction is drawn between the Art and the Science of Medicine. The Art in its Hippocratic sense has reference among other things to the practicing doctor's ability to inspire confidence in his patients and their relatives. This requires on his part an understanding of human nature, abounding unselfishness, unflagging sympathy, and observance of the Golden Rule.

brings healing.

Obstetricians should have small hands for the easier introduction of them into the womb when necessary, yet strong and the fingers long, especially the forefinger. He must have no rings on his fingers, and his nails well pared . . . have a pleasant countenance and be as neat in his clothes as in his person, that the poor women who have need of him be not affrighted at him. Some are of the opinion that a practioner of this art ought on the contrary to be slovenly, at least very careless, wearing a great beard to prevent the occasion of the husband's jealousy that sends for him.

i am a little church (no great cathedral)
far from the splendor and squalor of hurrying cities
—i do not worry if briefer days grow briefest,
i am not sorry when sun and rain make april

my life is the life of the reaper and the sower;
my prayers are prayers of earth's own clumsily striving (finding and losing and laughing and crying) children whose any sadness or joy is my grief or my gladness.

around me surges a miracle of unceasing
birth and glory and death and resurrection:
over my sleeping self float flaming symbols
of hope, and i wake to a perfect patience of mountains.

i am a little church (far from the frantic world with its rapture and anguish) at peace with nature
—i do not worry if longer nights grow longest;
i am not sorry when silence becomes singing.

winter by spring, i lift my diminutive spire to merciful Him Whose only now is forever:
standing erect in the deathless truth of His presence
(welcoming humbly His light and proudly His darkness)

In addition to the grace of God through Jesus Christ on which we are truly established, at this time in our lives our relationship, our marriage hinges on Linda's unselfishness. She must bow so often to the tremendous demand of time and energy this thing God has called me to do requires. People talk about the sacrifices I have made to be where I am. I have sacrificed nothing. God has called and I have followed happily. It is those around me who have sacrificed, principally Linda. She endures so much. I truly believe that this struggle through Medical School is primarily hers, for she must live with less husband than she deserves.
I rejoice in the wife you have given me Lord. She is without question the most wonderful woman alive.

If thou to health and vigor wouldst attain,

Those who do not know the torment of the unknown cannot have the joy of discovery, which is certainly the liveliest that the mind of man can ever feel. I do hereby affirm my loyalty to the profession I am about to enter.
I will be mindful always of my great responsibility to preserve the health and the life of my patients, to retain their confidence and respect both as a physician and a friend who will guard their secrets with scrupulous honor and fidelity, to perform faithfully my professional duties, to employ only those recognized methods of treatment consistent with good judgement and with my skill and ability, keeping in mind always nature's laws and the body's inherent capacity for recovery. I will be ever vigilant in aiding in the general welfare of the community, sustaining its laws and institutions, not engaging in those practices which will in any way bring shame or discredit upon myself or my profession.
I will give no drugs for deadly purposes to any person, though it be asked of me.
I will endeavor to work in accord with my colleagues in a spirit of progressive cooperation, and never by work or by act cast imputations upon them or their rightful practices.
I will look with respect and esteem upon all those who have taught me my art. To my college I will be loyal and strive always for its best interests and for the interests of the students who will come after me.

THE FUTURE
IS YOURS...and OURS

A challenging and fulfilling future lies ahead for those who are striving to earn their D.O. degrees. The past contributions of Osteopathic medicine have been many; those in the future will be even more significant.

Growth also has been the constant of Oklahoma Osteopathic Hospital. Opened with 75 beds in 1944, it now has 533 beds and is the largest single site Osteopathic medical center in the nation. Beyond that, OOH has state-of-the-art facilities in intensive care.
